

If We Could See Beyond Today

If we could see beyond today
As God can see,
If all the clouds should roll away,
The shadows flee;
O'er present griefs we would not fret,
Each sorrow we would soon forget,
For many joys are waiting yet
For you and me.

If we could know beyond today
As God doth know
Why dearest treasures pass away
And tears must flow;
And why the darkness leads to light,
Why dreary days will soon grow bright.
Someday life's wrongs will be made right;
Faith tells us so.

If we could see, if we could know
We often say;
But God in love a veil doth throw
Across our way.
We cannot see what lies before,
And so we cling to Him the more.
He leads us till this life is o'er;
Trust and obey.

“Jesus Would Take Even the Devil’s Castaways”

(As told by Dr. Tom Malone)

One of the most interesting things that I have ever read about the father of Methodism, John Wesley, is that one day he was preaching in London to a great open-air crowd. Mr. Wesley made the statement: “The love of God is so great and wonderful, and Jesus loves people so much that He would even save anybody the Devil does not want. He would take even the Devil’s castaways.”

After he preached, I believe it was Lady Huntington who asked John Wesley to her home for tea. While they were sitting around, someone in the royal family took John Wesley to task. “We heard you preach today, but you went too far. You said the Lord would save the Devil’s castaways. We don’t agree with you.”

About that time a servant came in and handed Mr. Wesley a note. When he inquired where it came from, the servant pointed to two glass doors and said, “Two old hags from the slums of London are standing yonder on the curb, and they gave this note to me for you.”

Mr. Wesley took the note. As he read, a sweet expression showed on his face. The note read:

“We heard you preach today. We have lived in sin all our lives. We’re the Devil’s castaways. We’re broken in body, in soul, in spirit; but today Jesus took us in.”

After John Wesley read that note, he said, “Maybe you didn’t agree with it; but, thank God, two miserable souls out yonder did and accepted it!”

Can You Find The Five Pointed Star

The star is hidden in the conglomeration of triangles. Are the soul winners in your church as hard to find and are you numbered among them?

“And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.” Daniel 12:3
